

Perka the Coyote and the Road Runner

Episode "Abroad"

"Road Ruuuunner, Road Ruuuunner, where aaaare you?"

Her voice can be heard from the other side of town. Then the phone rings.

"Come immediately for some grilled bird!" Perka shouts without lowering her voice.

"I'm not coming, because that grilled bird might be me. Your intentions are suspicious," the Road Runner mutters.

"Noooo, just some little grilled bird, innocent," she replies.

"Come on, come over. I've met the love of my life. He lives in Monte Carlo. We've been messaging and sooo... we recognized each other, and I'm supposed to go there soon."

"Think carefully before you go," a voice is heard in the background.

"Who's helping you with your love ecstasy from the side?" asks the Road Runner.

"Oh, the neighbor. Well yes, Road Runner, I can't just go like that — I have to weigh everything first."

"When you finish weighing, call me. You probably already found out his pension size in that romantic ecstasy."

"Oh, Road Runner, if only I told you... but love is important now, and pension and benefits come after the weighing."